HESED UNIVERSITY: A JOURNEY OF FAITH AND VISION

In 2020, as the world faced the uncertainty of a global pandemic, a divine vision for education emerged. Young people, especially children of missionaries and full-time ministers, needed an education that aligned with their spiritual calling.

Hesed University answered this call, launching a mission to equip Christian artists and architects to contribute to the creation of Christ-centered communities worldwide.

In a remarkable act of God's providence, Hesed University was blessed with a 13.52-acre property at 7725 Penrose Avenue, Elkins Park, PA—the former home of Temple University's Tyler School of Art. This historic space became the foundation for our vision:

- To train Christian designers and architects who will use their talents to glorify God.
- To empower students to serve in church construction, missions, and Kingdom work.
- To stand as a beacon of Christ-centered education, integrating faith, creativity, and academic excellence.

While our Elkins Park campus undergoes renovations, Hesed University incorporated in Delaware on July 10, 2024 and launched online classes, laying the groundwork for an institution dedicated to faith-driven education.

With God's guidance, we are building a light in the academic world, preparing the next generation to shine brightly for Christ in their callings.

A TRIBUTE TO FAITH AND CREATIVITY

The Joan Brix Carter Library will be a cornerstone of Hesed University's Pennsylvania campus, housed in Penrose Hall. This library stands as a tribute to Dr. Joan Brix Carter, honoring her lifelong dedication to arts education and her commitment to integrating Christian faith with artistic expression.

As a passionate advocate for faith-based art education, Dr. Carter's legacy will continue to inspire future generations of Christian designers and architects. The library will serve as a hub for academic excellence, research, and creative exploration, providing students with the resources and inspiration to shape the world through faith-driven design.

STATEMENT ON INSTITUTIONAL APPROVAL

Hesed University is in the early stages of obtaining institutional approval and accreditation. While the university does not currently hold formal accreditation, we are actively working to meet the academic and regulatory standards required for state approval and recognized degree programs.

Hesed University is committed to:

Building a strong academic foundation that meets the highest ethical and educational standards.

Securing approvals from state and national accrediting bodies.
Ensuring compliance with academic and professional benchmarks.

Upholding our Christ-centered mission to provide education that integrates faith and creativity.
